ABOUT US

Artificial intelligence (AI) and robotics are related fields of science and technology that work together to create robots that can perform tasks in a human-like way. AI allows articulated robots to perform tasks faster and more accurately. AI technologies infer information from vision sensors, such as 2D/3D cameras, to segment and understand scenes as well as detect and classify objects. Learn more about articulated robots and robotic arms. The six most common types of robots are autonomous mobile robots (AMRs), automated guided vehicles (AGVs), articulated robots, humanoids, cobots, and hybrids. Robots are used to drive efficiency, expedite processes, improve safety, and enhance experiences across many industries.

MISSION

The primary objectives of the AI Mission include establishing robust computing powers for AI within India. The mission seeks to enhance services for startups and entrepreneurs while fostering AI applications in critical sectors such as agriculture, healthcare, and education.

VISION

Artificial intelligence (AI) in robot vision is a technology that allows robots to see, understand, and interact with their environment. It uses cameras and sensors to capture images and video, which are then processed by computer algorithms to make sense of the visual data. This allows robots to perform tasks autonomously, such as navigating, manipulating objects, and making decisions
